Be a "Champion of Hope" for Children without Families

Millions of older children around the world are growing up in orphanages. Many lose hope. They wait and wait and wait for families, and no one ever comes. This is devastating to a child.

Children need families or a connection with a stable adult to grow and thrive. Research has shown that a connected, caring relationship with an adult is the most important factor in preventing a child from leading a life of violence and helping that child become a productive member of society.

Every child needs a family. The Sacred Portion Children's Outreach is dedicated to moving older children out of orphanages and into permanent, loving families. The organization creates advocacy strategies to help children without parents meet people through the summer family visits. These people often end up adopting, mentoring or staying connected to them.

104 children have found adoptive families through the Bozeman-based Summer of Hope program!
